College of Arts and Sciences - Biology - Subject: Biology

BIOL 101(3) Course ID:001266 10-MAR-2004General Biology I

Fundamental principles of biology; basic chemistry, cell structure and function, energy transformations, evolutionary theory, cellular reproduction, principles of genetics.

Components: Discussion, LectureCourse Equivalents: BIOL 124Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 102(3) Course ID:001267 28-SEP-2004General Biology II

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 111. Fundamental principles of biology, diversity of life, environmental and biological diversity, population and community ecology, study of plant structure and function, reproduction and controlling plant growth and development, comparative animal organ systems, mechanism of cell communication.

Components: Discussion, LectureRoom Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 111(1) Course ID:001268 01-JAN-1901General Biology I Lab

Complements the lecture material through observation, experimentation, and when appropriate, dissection of representative organisms. Observations will include physical and chemical phenomena as well as the anatomy and physiology of selected organisms. The organisms to be studied will be selected from the kingdoms monera, protista, fungi, plantae and animalia.

Components: LaboratoryRequirement Group: Pre-requisite or Co-requisite is BIOL 101.Room Requirements: Lab - Biology(1)

BIOL 112(1) Course ID:001269 01-JAN-1901General Biology II Lab

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 111. Complements the lecture material through observation, experimentation, and when appropriate, dissection of representative organisms. Observations will include physical and chemical phenomena as well as the anatomy and physiology of selected organisms. The organisms to be studied will be selected from the kingdoms monera, protista, fungi, plantae, and animalia.

Components: LaboratoryRoom Requirements: Lab - Biology(1)

BIOL 124(4) Course ID:001270 01-JAN-1901General Biology I*Components: LectureCourse Equivalents: BIOL 101Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 131(2) Course ID:001275 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent RequiredIntroductory Botany & Taxonomy

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Introduction to the plant body plan and the physiological role played by leaves, roots and stems during normal growth. Includes laboratory experiences examining the structure and function of plant organs, their use during plant reproduction, and their modification through evolutionary selection.

Components: LectureRoom Requirements: Electronic Classroom(1)

BIOL 132(1) Course ID:001276 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent RequiredHardy Bulbs

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Students learn the taxonomy and identification of a variety of bulb plants and the appropriate uses of bulb plants in garden settings.

Components: Lecture

BIOL 133(1) Course ID:001277 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent RequiredFlowering Trees

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Students use taxonomy and character analysis to identify a variety of small flowering trees, and learn the environmental and nutritional needs supporting normal tree growth.

Components: Lecture

Deciduous Trees

Prerequisite: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Identification and taxonomy of common Midwestern trees using leaf and stem morphology as characters for analysis. Appropriate care of trees in a garden setting.

Components: Laboratory, Lecture

BIOL 135(1) Course ID:001279 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent Required
Ground Cover & Vines

Prerequisite: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Exploration of the taxonomy and life histories of a variety of vine and ground cover plants using living examples. Environmental factors impacting the growth of these plant types.

Components: Lecture

BIOL 136(1) Course ID:001280 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent Required
Deciduous Flowering Shrubs

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Examples of flowering shrubs at the Chicago Botanic Garden will be used to identify morphological characteristics common to shrub families and species. Students use taxonomic approaches to differentiate plant types, and learn the environmental and physiological requirements for shrub growth.

Components: Lecture

BIOL 137(1) Course ID:001281 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent Required
Annual & Biennial Plant Materials

Prerequisite: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Identification of a representative sample of annual and biennial plants at the level of taxonomic genus, species and cultivar; introduction to environmental inputs that influence the growth and development of these plant types.

Components: Lecture

BIOL 138(1) Course ID:001282 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent Required
Herbaceous Perennials

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Taxonomy of herbaceous perennials is using living plants; identification and classification of plants according to their visible characters.

Components: Lecture

BIOL 139(1) Course ID:001283 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent Required
Conifers & Broad-leaved Evergreens

Prerequisite: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Students use the conifer and evergreen collections at the Chicago Botanic Garden to learn the taxonomy of these important plants and the appropriate garden settings for these plant types.

Components: Lecture

BIOL 140(1) Course ID:001284 01-MAR-2005 Department Consent Required
Local Flora

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. The taxonomy and evolution of land plants is explored through the identification and classification of wild plants. Extensive field exposure to plants in the wild; students should be prepared for all weather conditions.

Components: Laboratory, Lecture

BIOL 141(1) Course ID:001285 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent Required
Survey of Plant Disorders

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. Key economic pests and pathogens of plants, with an emphasis on pest identification, life histories, population dynamics and control. Exercises emphasize plant health care.

Components: Lecture

BIOL 142(1) Course ID:001286 01-JAN-1901 Department Consent Required
Understanding Soils

Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102, 111, 112, BIOL 205. The chemistry and physical composition of soils; ways in which soil micro- and macronutrients promote normal plant growth and development.

Components: Lecture

| BIOL 280(3) Evolution of Human Disease | Course ID:001311 | 01-JAN-1901 |
|---|-------------------------|--------------------|

Prerequisites: BIOL 102. Introduces students to the complex interaction between human hosts and pathogens. Begins with an introduction to immunology and discussion and analysis of particular paradigms that strive to model host/pathogen interaction. Using the paradigms, paleopathological and paleodemographic information, students explore the patterns of human diseases throughout prehistory and history. Addresses the role of human biology, human culture, and changing environments.

Components: Lecture
Course Equivalents: ANTH 280
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

| | | |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------|--------------------|
| BIOL 282(3) Genetics | Course ID:001312 | 01-JAN-1901 |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------|--------------------|

Prerequisites: BIOL 102, 112, CHEM 102 or 106. Fundamental genetic principles and mechanics of genetic inheritance, expression and change. Course content includes classical, molecular and mathematical approaches to understanding the nature of the genetic process.

Components: Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisites: BIOL 102, 112; CHEM 102 or 106.

BIOL 342(4) Course ID:001346 01-APR-2005
Introduction to Human Anatomy
Prerequisite: BIOL 251, BIOL 282 A non-laboratory introduction to the structure of the human body. While major emphasis will be placed on structure at the gross level, tissue structure, embryogenesis, organogenesis and physiological correlates will also be considered.
Components: Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisite: BIOL 251.
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 345(3) Course ID:001347 01-JAN-1901
Sociobiology
Prerequisites: BIOL 265, 282. The social behavior of animals with an emphasis on the evolutionary and ecological determinants of those behaviors.
Components: Lecture
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 350(4) Course ID:001348 01-APR-2005
Vertebrate Physiology Lec/Lab
Prerequisites: BIOL 251, 282; CHEM 222 or 224. Lecture and laboratory. Animal function and structure; emphasis on humans and other vertebrates as basis for understanding organ physiology. Functional relationships stressed. Feeding, digestion, water relations, respiration, hormone systems, receptor and effector mechanisms, central nervous coordination, regulation of homeostasis, dynamics of the circulatory system and the physiology of bone and musculature.
Components: Laboratory, Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisite: BIOL 251, 282; CHEM 222 or 224.
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 352(3) Course ID:001350 01-JAN-1901
Mammalian Endocrinology
Prerequisite: BIOL 350. Survey of hormones that regulate metabolism, salt and water balance, calcium and phosphorus metabolism, and reproduction; special emphasis on hormonal transduction signals and integration of endocrine systems.
Components: Lecture
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 354(3) Course ID:001351 01-APR-2005
Mammalian Reproduction
Prerequisite: BIOL 251, 282. Anatomy and physiology of male and female reproductive systems, fertilization, implantation, pregnancy, and birth; immunological aspects of reproduction.
Components: Laboratory, Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisite: BIOL 251.
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 358(3) Course ID:001355 11-MAR-2004 Department Consent Required
Developmental Neurobiology
Prerequisites: BIOL 251 and 282. Lecture/discussions will focus on several issues central to developmental neurobiology: control of neural differentiation, proliferation and migration of neural progenitor cells, regional specification of the nervous system, axon guidance, synapse formation and refinement, and control of cell suicide/survival. Students are also given the opportunity to apply their knowledge to the interpretation of important primary research papers, students also learn how to present these papers to their future colleagues.
Components: Discussion, Lecture
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 359(3) Course ID:001356 01-JAN-1901
Paleopathology
Prerequisites: BIOL 251, ANTH 326. Normal bone tissue and normal bone alterations and the impact of various disease processes on skeletal tissue. Students will be taught to assess and interpret patterns of human disease in processual rather than typological terms.
Components: Lecture
Course Equivalents: ANTH 359

Field Biology
Prerequisite: BIOL 265 and permission of chairperson. Ecological study of an area in North America outside Midwest. Includes a field trip to a specific region. Trip is at student expense.
Components: Lecture
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 362(3) Course ID:001358 01-JAN-1901
Neurobiology
Prerequisite: BIOL 251. The study of neurons and nervous systems. The purpose is to introduce major principles and concepts in modern neurobiology. An emphasis is placed upon an understanding of the electro-physiology of the neuron and the manner in which groups of neurons are organized into functional nervous systems subserving sensory, motor or integrative functions.
Components: Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisite: BIOL 251.
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 363(4) Course ID:001360 01-JAN-1901
Entomology Lec/Lab
Prerequisite: BIOL 265. Lecture and laboratory. The biology of all major insect orders including metamorphosis, life cycles and behavior as well as the beneficial and detrimental relationships of insects to humans. Laboratory stresses insect anatomy, taxonomy and classification. Field trips and student collections enrich the laboratory experience.
Components: Laboratory, Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisite: BIOL 265
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 364(4) Course ID:001362 11-MAR-2004
Med & Vet Entomology Lec/Lab
Prerequisite: BIOL 265. Lecture and laboratory. Insects and related arthropods of medical, public health and veterinary importance. The epidemiology of arthropod borne diseases throughout the world including the relationships between vectors, pathogens and hosts. Laboratory covers the anatomy, identification and classification of species of medical and veterinary importance and includes the collection and curation of local species.
Components: Laboratory, Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisite: BIOL 265
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

BIOL 366(3) Course ID:001364 01-APR-2005
Cell Physiol & Biochem
Prerequisites: BIOL 251, 282; CHEM 224 or equivalent. Lecture and laboratory. An introduction to biochemical principles as they relate to major biological themes such as the relationship between cellular structure and function, metabolism, thermodynamics, regulation, information pathways, and evolution.
Components: Discussion, Lecture
Requirement Group: Pre-requisite: BIOL 251 & CHEM 224 or 222.
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

Botany Courses Offered at the Chicago Botanic Garden (CBG): The courses offered at the CBG (BIOL 131-143, 206 and 207) are acceptable for elective credit toward completion of the Biology major at Loyola University Chicago. These courses significantly extend the number and diversity of Botany classes available to Loyola students, and provide our students with the opportunity to work with the research and teaching staff of the CBG. Loyola students receive between 1 and 2 hours of credit for these courses and may apply a total of 4 hours of CBG course credit towards their Loyola degree. Some of the CBG courses have laboratory components; however, since CBG courses are all in a short-course format these courses cannot be counted as laboratory classes for the majors in Biology. Loyola students are required to complete General Biology (BIOL 101, 111 and 102, 112) and Plant Biology (BIOL 205) before enrolling in CBG courses. | | | |

| CHEM 151(4) Elem Physiological Chemistry A Prerequisite: high school chemistry or permission of chairperson. Lecture, quiz, and laboratory. Emphasis on the development of basic chemical properties and electron configuration, states of matter, gas laws, stoichiometry and energetics of reactions, aqueous equilibria, the use of radioisotopes in medicine, environmental considerations, and an introduction to structure and nomenclature in organic chemistry. Primarily for nursing students. Components: Discussion, Laboratory, Lecture Room Requirements: General Classroom(1) | Course ID:001591 | 15-AUG-2004 |
|---|-------------------------|--------------------|

|---|-------------------------|--------------------|
| CHEM 152(4) Elem Physiological Chemistry B Prerequisite: 151. Lecture, quiz and laboratory. Survey of organic chemistry including nomenclature and reactions of functional groups followed by a survey of biochemical topics including stereochemistry, carbohydrates, lipids, proteins, nucleic acids, digestion, metabolism, vitamins, hormones, and blood. Primarily for nursing students. Components: Discussion, Laboratory, Lecture Room Requirements: General Classroom(1) | Course ID:001594 | 15-AUG-2004 |

|---|-------------------------|--------------------|
| CHEM 221(4) Organic Chem I Lec/Disc Prerequisite: 106 (preferred), or 102 and 112. Lecture, discussion and laboratory. An intensive course for chemistry majors using a mechanistic approach. Topics include organic nomenclature, chemical and physical properties and reactions of several classes of aliphatic compounds, stereochemistry and introduction to spectroscopy. Components: Discussion, Laboratory, Lecture Requirement Group: Restricted to Chemistry Majors. Room Requirements: General Classroom(1) | Course ID:001601 | 04-APR-2005 |
|---|-------------------------|--------------------|

|---|-------------------------|--------------------|
| CHEM 222(4) Organic Chem II Lec/Disc Prerequisite: 221. Lecture, discussion and laboratory. Continuation of 221. Nomenclature, properties, reactions and syntheses of further classes of aliphatic and aromatic compounds, carbohydrates and other polyfunctional substances; spectroscopy. Components: Discussion, Laboratory, Lecture Room Requirements: General Classroom(1) | Course ID:001604 | 28-SEP-2004 |
|---|-------------------------|--------------------|

|--|-------------------------|--------------------|
| CHEM 223(3) Organic Chemistry A Lecture & Discussion Prerequisites: 102 and 112, or 106. Lecture and discussion. First semester of a two semester sequence for non-chemistry majors. A survey of topics including stereochemistry; spectroscopy; and fundamental concepts of organic chemistry. Nomenclature, properties and syntheses of aliphatic and aromatic hydrocarbons, alkyl halides, alcohols and ethers. Components: Discussion, Lecture Room Requirements: General Classroom(1) | Course ID:001607 | 15-AUG-2004 |
|--|-------------------------|--------------------|

|---|-------------------------|--------------------|
| CHEM 224(3) Organic Chem B Lec/Disc Prerequisite: 223 or equivalent. Lecture. Continuation of 223; for non-chemistry majors. Organic chemistry of carbonyl compounds, amines, carboxylic acids and their derivatives, carbohydrates, lipids and proteins. Components: Discussion, Lecture Room Requirements: General Classroom(1) | Course ID:001609 | 15-AUG-2004 |

| CHEM 300(1 - 6) Undergraduate Research | Course ID:001613 | 01-JAN-1901 | Instructor Consent Required |

Prerequisites: prior consultation with the instructor and a completed agreement form. Directed study involving a contractual arrangement between student and instructor for accomplishing a defined research task. Agreement forms may be obtained from the department office, and the completed form (signed by the student, instructor, and chairperson) must be deposited in the chemistry department office before the student can register for this course.

| Classical Mythology - Women/Gender Focus | | |
| Requirement: UCLR 100 for students admitted to Loyola University for Fall 2012 or later. No requirement for students admitted to Loyola prior to Fall 2012 or those with a declared major or minor in the Department of English, Department of Classical Studies, or Department of Modern Languages and Literatures. This course examines Greek and Roman literature involving myth and how peoples use traditional narratives and characters to explain and experiment with ideas about themselves and their surroundings in their historical, social, cultural and intellectual contexts. CLST 271G focuses, within this field, on concerns of women's studies and gender studies. Outcomes: Students should be able to demonstrate knowledge of the fundamental myths of the ancient Greek and Roman world, their language and possible meanings, and how myth reflected important collective and individual concerns, values, beliefs, and practices then, even as modern myth does now. | | |

Introduction to Computing
 This course may be taken concurrently with COMP 125 or 170. A broad survey of the many layers of the computer science discipline, emphasizing the computer's role as a tool for describing, organizing, and manipulating information. Topics include machine architecture, basic programming and scripting, data organization, and useful tools. Serves as both a one-course introduction to computer science and a preliminary course to upper-level offerings in the field.

HIST 108(3) Course ID:009584 11-FEB-2005East Asia in the Emergence of the Modern World

This course explores the roles and contributions of the major East Asian States during the formation of the modern world from the sixteenth century to the present. During the first three centuries of this period while China reached what was in some ways the heights of traditional economic, political, and cultural development, Japan built upon its recent political unification to begin laying the groundwork for the transition to modernity. The nineteenth and twentieth centuries saw Japan rise to the great power status, fall into military confrontation and defeat, and rise again. During the same period China struggled to overcome both domestic and foreign obstacles to development which resulted in its many experiments with reform, revolution, and new reforms. During the entire period Korea sought to find a safe middle ground between its two powerful Asian neighbors even as the mid-twentieth century and after Cold War confrontations pulled it apart. This course satisfies the historical knowledge area, develops critical thinking and communication skills, and gives

MATH 131(3) Course ID:005010 15-AUG-2004Elements of Calculus I

Prerequisite: Math Diagnostic Test or MATH 118. An introduction to differential and integral calculus, taught at the intuitive level, intended primarily for students in the life and social sciences, computer science, and business. Topics include: limits, continuity, differentiation, exponential growth and decay, integration, area, the fundamental theorem of calculus, chain-rule, curve-sketching including concavity, applied max/min problems. Students may not receive credit for both MATH 131 and 161 without chair's permission.

MATH 161(4) Course ID:005023 01-JAN-1901Calculus I

Prerequisite: Math Diagnostic Test or Math 118. A traditional introduction to differential and integral calculus. Functions, limits, continuity, differentiation, intermediate and mean-value theorems, curve sketching, optimization problems, related rates, definite and indefinite integrals, fundamental theorem of calculus, log and exponential functions. Applications to physics and other disciplines. Students may not receive credit for both MATH 161 and MATH 131 without chair's permission.

Components: LectureRequirement Group: Pre-requisite: Math Diagnostic Test or MATH 118.Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

MATH 162(4) Course ID:005024 01-JAN-1901Calculus II

Prerequisite: MATH 161. A continuation of MATH 161. Calculus of logarithmic, exponential, inverse trigonometric, and hyperbolic functions. Techniques of integration. Improper integrals. Applications of integration to volume, surface area, arc length, center of mass, and work. Numerical sequences and series. Study of power series and the theory of convergence. Taylor's theorem with remainder.

 Integrative Experience I
 This course provides the student with the necessary guidance for an interdisciplinary study of the theme of the annual lecture series. Students attend the three lectures of the Medieval Studies Program each semester. They meet regularly with their advisors, and write a term paper incorporating the lectures and readings from a variety of disciplines, as well as from their other medieval coursework.

Seminar in Neuroscience. (1) Prerequisites: BIOL 101, 102; PSYC 101. Intended for neuroscience minors. Introduces students to neuroscience research activities at Loyola University Chicago, including the Parmlly Hearing Institute, Departments of Biology, Psychology, and Loyola University Medical Center, especially the neuroscience programs. Topics include research opportunities in neuroscience, ethics in neuroscience research, discussion of the brain and mind, and review of current neuroscience topics.

Laboratory in Neuroscience II. (BIOL 374) (PSYC 389) Prerequisite: NEUR 301. The second of two laboratory courses intended for neuroscience minors. The course covers anatomical, physiological, behavioral, and neurobiological modeling techniques used to study the nervous system and the brain. This course prepares students to conduct independent research projects. Students conduct one independent research project during the last part of the course. The following courses in the interdisciplinary neuroscience minor are described in the listings of the originating departments.

Liberal Arts Physics
 Prerequisites: high school algebra, geometry. Lecture and demonstration. A course for non-science majors that emphasizes the beauty, symmetry, and simplicity of physics through actual practice. Topics selected from classical and modern physics; contemporary issues of physics and technology are discussed.
 Components: Lecture
 Attributes: CORE Scientific Literacy
 Room Requirements: Electronic Classroom(1)

PHYS 103(3) Course ID:005846 01-JAN-1901
Planet & Solar Syst Astronomy
 Prerequisites: high school algebra, geometry. Study of the sun, planets, satellites, asteroids, comets and other members of the solar system; investigation of the properties of individual solar system members and theories of formation of planets, satellites and the sun. Historical studies and results obtained from space probes.
 Components: Lecture
 Course Equivalents: NTSC 117
 Attributes: CORE Scientific Literacy
 Room Requirements: Electronic Classroom(1)

PHYS 104(3) Course ID:005847 20-FEB-2004
Astronomy of Stars & Galaxies
 Prerequisites: high school algebra, geometry. Basic concepts about the birth, evolution and death of stars, the clustering of stars and galaxies, the expanding universe and cosmology. Topics include: the Big Bang model, red giants, white dwarfs, neutron stars, pulsars, quasars, black holes, and possible endings of the universe.
 Components: Lecture(In person)
 Attributes: CORE Scientific Literacy
 Room Requirements: Electronic Classroom(1)

PHYS 105(3) Course ID:005848 01-JAN-1901
Observational Astronomy
 Prerequisites: 103 or 104. The observational basis of astronomy with special emphasis on student projects which include both outdoor observations and indoor experiments. Projects may include the use of the college's midsize reflecting telescopes, as well as various spectroscopic and optics equipment.
 Components: Lecture
 Room Requirements: Electronic Classroom(1)

PHYS 111(3) Course ID:005849 15-AUG-2004
College Physics I Lec/Dis
 Prerequisites: college algebra or equivalent, trigonometry and geometry. Lecture and discussion. Together with 112, this provides a comprehensive, non-calculus introduction to physics. Vectors, forces, Newtonian mechanics of translational, rotational, and oscillatory motion; heat.
 Components: Discussion, Lecture
 Room Requirements: Electronic Classroom(1)

PSYC 230(3) Course ID:006150 01-JAN-1901
Parenting Through Life Span
 (WOST 230) Psychological aspects of parenting are reviewed from the perspectives of both parent and child with consideration given to the effect of developmental, social, and cultural forces. Lectures and exercises are combined in order to evaluate relevant theories and research from both the academic and personal perspectives.
 Components: Lecture
 Course Equivalents: WOST 230
 Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

PSYC 235(3) Course ID:006151 01-JAN-1901
Psychology of Human Sexuality
 Sexuality as an important aspect of human functioning and its integration into the total person will be emphasized. Topics include: the biological, psychological and sociocultural aspects of human sexuality, along with sexual dysfunction, and sex roles.
 Components: Lecture
 Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

PSYC 238(3) Course ID:006152 01-JAN-1901
Gender & Sex Diff & Similar
 (WOST 238) Consideration of theory and research related to the differences between males and females resulting from biological factors, learning, and social roles. Topics include traditional and non-traditional roles, role strain, social and psychological factors influencing role choice, and implications for adults; interpersonal, parental, and work orientations.
 Components: Lecture
 Course Equivalents: WOST 238
 Attributes: CORE Societal and Cultural Literacy, CORE Values - Diversity
 Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

PSYC 240(3) Course ID:006153 01-JAN-1901
Psych-Biol of Perception
 Consideration of the major sensory and perceptual systems (primarily vision and audition) of humans and animals emphasizing: (1) historical development of the field; (2) multi-disciplinary scientific approaches; (3) recent research and theory on the mechanisms of seeing, hearing, and other sensory processes; and (4) applications of these results to medical diagnosis and treatment, and to other areas.
 Components: Lecture
 Course Equivalents: BIOL 240
 Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

Cognitive Psychology
Prerequisite: PSYC 101 Overview of cognitive psychology. Topics include: human information processing, perception, memory, mental imagery, language, thinking, artificial intelligence, pattern recognition, and problem solving. Group A.
Components: Lecture
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

PSYC 251(3) Course ID:006155 01-JAN-1901
Learning and Behavior
Prerequisite: PSYC 101 Introduction to the understanding of behavior based on principles of learning and behavior control derived from the study of classical and instrumental (operant) conditioning. Interactions between innate dispositions and experimental factors are discussed, as is the application of conditioning-learning principles to such areas as behavior therapy, education, and self-control. Group A.
Components: Lecture
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

PSYC 273(3) Course ID:006156 01-JAN-1901
Developmental Psychology
Prerequisite: PSYC 101 (CPSY 273) Survey of theory and research relevant to human growth and development with emphasis on personality, maturation, and learning. Group B.
Components: Lecture
Course Equivalent: CPSY 273
Room Requirements: General Classroom(1)

PSYC 275(3) Course ID:006157 01-JAN-1901
Social Psychology
Prerequisite: PSYC 101 or BIOL 102. Analysis of human thoughts, feelings and actions as influenced by other people. Topics include: socialization, perception of self and others, prosocial and antisocial behavior, attitudes, interpersonal attraction, social influence, and group behavior. Group B.

 Globalization, Education and Childhood
 This course examines contemporary global shifts and transformations in how schools and other educational settings are set up and operate. In tandem with this the course examines the experience of childhood and notions of what it means to be a child;both in terms of how this varies culturally, socioeconomically, and regionally, as well as how these experiences and conceptualizations are presently being transformed. Outcomes: Students will be able to demonstrate an understanding of how global and local issues are interwoven with regard to education. Students will be able to articulate a nuanced understanding (as regards schooling and education) of the ways that social justice concerns are being both advanced and hindered in our contemporary globalized world.

 Urban Education: Policy and Practice
 This course introduces students to some of the central policy questions currently afoot in American public education through consideration of one particular field of concern, Urban Education. Explores the sociological dimensions of schooling, the important questions of how race, social class and ethnicity impact American education, and the relationship between resources and outcomes at the heart of arguments about schools. Outcomes: Students will be able to analyze the multiple and contested factors that influence urban education in the US. Students will be able to demonstrate an understanding of the ways that policy is connected to practice in urban education.

| This course in will explore the roots of Ignatian Spirituality as presented in the Spiritual Exercise and other writings of Ignatius Loyola and the early Jesuits. From this historical starting point, the course will shift to explore key themes that have emerged from from this spiritual tradition as it relates to medicine, paying special attention to the Spiritual Exercises. Outcomes: This course aims to assist students in establishing a substantive understanding of Ignatian spirituality and the tradition of Jesuit education in which they participate as a means for leading faithful, joyful, and hopeful lives as physicians. | | | |

| This course gives brief treatment to agency and covers partnership as an alternative to the corporate form. Principal emphasis is on the law as it applies to the organization and functioning of corporations. The course focuses on structure and mechanics, capitalization, distributions, organic changes, and duties and liabilities of directors, officers, and controlling shareholders. The federal securities acts are introduced with particular attention to Rule 10b-5. Substantial attention is given to the special problems of the close corporation. This course counts as a Bar course. | | | |

| LAW 274(1) International Arbitration | Course ID:007249 | 07-FEB-2004 |
| This is a one credit course taught sometimes in one of the summer programs. In this course, students will learn how international commercial arbitration works. In most international contracts, the parties agree that all disputes will be resolved by arbitration. This private dispute mechanism provides a number of advantages over litigation. One of the most important advantages is that by agreeing to arbitrate, a party avoids ending up in the other party's court system. An arbitration award is also more easily enforced in a foreign jurisdiction than a court judgment, because of an international treaty known as the New York Convention. Students will learn about the various laws and rules governing international arbitration, as well as specific, practical knowledge about arbitrating, such as how to draft an arbitration clause, how to choose an arbitral institution, how to select arbitrators, the ethical rules that apply to arbitrators, the bases for challenging arbitrators, the conduct of the arbitral hearing, rules governing admission of evidence, | | |

 International and Comparative Employment Law
 This seminar will begin with a brief baseline description of some of the most significant features of United States labor and employment law. Comparative materials will then cover the basic employment laws of Canada and Mexico. We will then look at the regional regime established in the NAFTA labor side accords. Next we will move to Europe to study the employment laws of the United Kingdom, Germany and France, followed by the regional employment laws generated by the European Union. Following that, we will look at the employment laws of Japan, China and India. The final focus of the seminar will be on International labor law, particularly the International Labor organization.

Telecommunications Law
 This course surveys the field of electronic communications, from the telephone to broadcast media to the Internet. Historically, the field of communications has been divided between the traditional mass media (broadcasting, cable, satellite broadcasting) and telecommunications media (wireline and wireless telephone carriers). Today, the two general divisions are converging. One of the vehicles of that convergence is the Internet, which is capable of providing both mass media and individual communications services. This course will examine legal issues affecting all of these media. Much of the course material necessarily covers the history and theory of communications regulation as practically applied through FCC rulemakings.

| LAW 418(2) Pre-Trial Litigation This course integrates a theoretical and practical approach to the pretrial components of litigation. Students gain an understanding of the purpose of pleadings, pretrial motions, depositions, and settlement conferences, and extend their knowledge through practical experience. The second portion of the course complements the courses in trial practices by investigating the psychology of courtroom communication and its related effects. Overall, students should develop a more well-rounded perspective of the pretrial aspects of litigation. | Students who have completed 51 credit hours may receive two or three hours of credit per semester for supervised work performed in an approved extern field placement site. Work performed in this setting will enhance the student's understanding of legal issues as they relate to children. The externship course includes a classroom component which has been designed to compliment and support the field placement. The course is taught on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 5:00pm-6:00pm. Students may select the day of the week they wish to attend the class at the time they apply for the externship. Applications are available on the law school website and in the offices of the Director of Experiential Learning. | | | |

| LAW 608(2) Juvenile Justice | Course ID:004733 | 01-JAN-1901 |
| This course will attempt to answer the following questions: How should society handle allegations of criminal behavior by children? In what way should the proceedings be designed to address the differences between children and adults? Who should decide whether a child should benefit from special treatment, judges or legislators? What responsibility do parents and communities bear in providing children an opportunity to change their behavior? How should the justice system and the school system interact? While the intersection between the child welfare and juvenile justice systems will be discussed, this course will not address child welfare practice generally or in much detail. Students will be required to prepare brief position papers during the term. The remainder of the grade will be based on performance in class and on a final examination or a major research paper written in lieu of the final exam. | | |

| LAW 610(1 - 2) Intl Children's Human Rights | Course ID:004735 | 01-JAN-1901 |
| In the last decade, children have become "the newest kids on the human rights block." This seminar examines new laws and treaties developed to respond to age-old problems faced by children around the world. The course begins with a study of the U.N. Convention on the Rights of the Child, the most rapidly and widely accepted human rights document in the history of international law. It then examines ways in which these laws are being implemented, including a review of child and family law cases decided by the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg. The course explores such substantive areas as the comparative treatment of child abuse and delinquency, and the issues of child labor, international abduction, the plight of child soldiers, and the sexual exploitation of children. | | |

Mediation Practicum
 This mediation course allows students to mediate family cases through several community projects. Students are required to have participated in some type of 40-hour mediation training in order to register for this course. These students receive additional training in family mediation, co-mediation and related issues. Students mediate in family group conferences and other multiple party mediations. Students participate in multiple simulation and mediations and receive feedback on their skills. The course meets once a week for the two hours for most of the semester, however students are also required to mediate at other times during the semester. There is no examination. Grading is based on participation in mediations, simulations and discussions and self-evaluations. Students may take the course for 1 or 2 credits. For 2 credits, a paper on mediation theory or practice is required. Where the student is taking the course for 2 credits, the research paper is included in the grade. Enrollment is limited to eight students.

Intro to Health Law
 This course provides a broad survey of the most fundamental legal issues surrounding the delivery of health care in America. No prior knowledge of health law is required. Major topics include state and federal regulation of health care providers and institutions; tort liability in the context of medical care; patient and provider rights and obligations; public and private insurance systems; and basic issues in bioethics and public health. By the end of this course, students should understand both the current state of American health law, and the social forces that have shaped its historical development. This course counts as a Perspective Elective course.
