

PUBLIC POLICY (MPP)

Job growth, affordable housing, educational reform, environmental degradation—these are just a few of the significant challenges that face society today. The public policy program at Loyola can help students transform their interest in these types of problems into the ability to analyze and act upon them. The curriculum brings together knowledge about current government programs with the technical skills to assess how politics influence policy choices, how to design more effective programs, and how to evaluate the impacts of existing ones.

The Master of Public Policy (MPP) program at Loyola is a two-year professional degree focused on training students to assume leadership roles in government, non-profit organizations, or businesses. Part-time students typically finish in three years. Internships or capstone projects allow students to apply the skills developed in the program and gain work-related experience.

Curriculum

The MPP degree program requires 37 credit-hours of coursework—11 three-credit courses, plus a three-credit internship or capstone experience, and a one-credit professional development course.

Internship or Capstone Experience

For students without significant professional work experience prior to starting the program, an internship is required. Most students complete their internships in the summer between their first and second years. For students with professional work experience, a capstone project or policy clinic resulting in a major analytical report could be done instead.

Graduate & Professional Standards and Regulations

Students in graduate and professional programs can find their Academic Policies in Graduate and Professional Academic Standards and Regulations (<https://catalog.luc.edu/graduate-professional-academic-standards-regulations/>) under their school. Any additional University Policies supercede school policies.

Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the MPP program, graduates will be able to:

1. Design policy interventions and apply criteria to assess the best option in each specific case
2. Understand a government budget and evaluate it from different stakeholder positions
3. Understand the political process at the federal, state and local government levels
4. Develop political messaging to advocate for policies and to build a political coalition of support for a program
5. Apply appropriate statistical procedures used in public policy research and practice
6. Design, conduct and critique program evaluations
7. Experience working in the public policy arena in government agency, non-profit, research, or private sector organization
