

HIGHER EDUCATION (EDD)

Earn an education doctorate as preparation for an executive-level administrative career in higher education.

The EdD in Higher Education focuses on supporting problem-posing research and the critical development of a practitioner-scholar for executive-level administrative leadership within postsecondary contexts. This hybrid-delivery, weekend format program focuses on coursework that draws from students' significant professional/lived experience connected to theoretical frameworks and concepts, providing additional skills, competencies, and knowledge needed to be social justice change-agents. Through a dissertation project, students will carry out a mode of inquiry that connects theory and practice, and fosters analytic actions around a critical issue in the field of higher education.

CURRICULUM

With 24 transfer credit hours from a previous graduate degree, completion of the EdD degree program requires an additional 48 semester hours of graduate credit at Loyola University, Chicago. Students are also required to complete a capstone project at the conclusion of coursework and a dissertation study to complete the degree.
