

SOCIAL JUSTICE WITH A CONCENTRATION IN SOCIAL ENTERPRISE (MA)

The Institute of Pastoral Studies and Quinlan School of Business partner to offer an optional concentration in Social Enterprise. With this track, students will have the opportunity to develop, in consultation with their academic advisors, course plans that will help them gain understanding and nurture business skills specific to their interests and context. Students can focus on areas such as marketing, management, leadership, operations, accounting, entrepreneurship, and more. With business knowledge and skills, graduates of the MASJ-SE program will be equipped to lead social justice organizations effectively and sustainably over time, increasing the depth and breadth of their social impact.

The following IPS degree programs are approved by the Commission on Accrediting: Master of Divinity, Master of Arts in Christian Spirituality (Professional MA), Master of Arts in Counseling for Ministry (Professional MA), Master of Arts in Pastoral Counseling (Professional MA), and the Master of Arts in Social Justice (Professional MA) were also approved, as were our comprehensive online (distance education) programs.

Curriculum

The MA in Social Justice is a 36 credit hour degree that requires 8 core courses (<https://www.luc.edu/ips/degrees/social-justice/curriculum/>) and 3 elective courses along with a sequence of Contextual Education courses (<https://www.luc.edu/ips/degrees/social-justice/curriculum/>) (3 credit hours) and a Final Integration Project (<https://www.luc.edu/ips/degrees/social-justice/curriculum/>). For the Concentration in Social Enterprise, students must take their 3 elective courses from among those comprising the MBA program at the Quinlan School Business (QSB). One of those business courses must be MGMT 485 Social Enterprise. The other two business courses will be chosen according to each student's experience, context, and goals in consultation with their academic advisor at the IPS and the Associate Dean for Graduate Programs at Quinlan School of Business.
