POLITICAL SCIENCE (BA)

Curriculum

To graduate with a major in Political Science, students must complete 33 hours of course work (11 courses) in the department or through transfer or advanced placement credit. All majors are required to take any three of the following four courses: PLSC 100 Political Theory, PLSC 101 American Politics, PLSC 102 International Relations in an Age of Globalization, and PLSC 103 Comparative Politics plus one upperdivision (200- or 300-level) course from each of the discipline's four subfields: American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations and Political Theory.

<sup>1</sup> If students take PLSC 100, 101, or 102 as the three required courses for the major, they can also take PLSC 103 and have it count as an elective in the major. Students in the BA/MA Political Science and Students in the BA/MA in International Affairs can count two of the graduate level courses (at the 400 or 500 level) that they take in their senior year as electives in the PLSC major, alongside the other two courses at the 200 or 300 level.

Curricular Notes

- The Political Science internship program (PLSC 370), a 3- or 6-credit hour course, counts as one of the four Political Science electives. Only 3 credits of PLSC 370 may count toward the PLSC major, the other three will be counted as general electives. An exception is made for students who complete an internship in Chicago as well as an internship via the Washington, DC program. In that case, 3 credit hours from each internship may be applied to the major.
- The following courses do not fulfill subfield requirements but do count as electives toward the PLSC major. PLSC 396 Directed Readings and PLSC 216 Political Numbers (PLSC 216 also fulfills the core quantitative reasoning requirement for PLSC majors only.)
- The following courses neither fulfill subfield requirements nor count as electives toward the PLSC major. PLSC 395 Political Science Honors Seminar. This is an extra course that students take beyond the major requirements in order to graduate with Honors in Political Science.

Majors Declared Prior to July 2021

All students who declared their major prior to July 1 2021, are subject to the previous requirements: they are required to take all three of the following courses: PLSC 100 Political Theory, PLSC 101 American Politics, and PLSC 102 International Relations in an Age of Globalization plus one upper-division (200- or 300-level) course from each of the discipline's four subfields: American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations and Political Theory.

Transferring Credit

At least 17 credit hours of PLSC courses must be completed at Loyola.

Double Dipping Policy

Political Science adheres to the CAS Double Dipping Policy (https:// catalog.luc.edu/undergraduate/arts-sciences/#policiestext).

College of Arts and Sciences Graduation Requirements

All Undergraduate students in the College of Arts and Sciences are required to take two Writing Intensive courses (6 credit hours) as well as complete a foreign language requirement at 102-level or higher (3 credit hours) or a language competency test. More information can be found here (https://www.luc.edu/cas/college-requirements/).

Additional Undergraduate Graduation Requirements

All Undergraduate students are required to complete the University Core, at least one Engaged Learning course, and UNIV 101. SCPS students are not required to take UNIV 101. Nursing students in the Accelerated BSN program are not required to take core or UNIV 101. You can find more information in the University Requirements (https://catalog.luc.edu/undergraduate/university-requirements/) area.

Learning Outcomes

The BA in Political Science is designed to achieve the following learning outcomes:

- Provide students with an in-depth understanding of four foundational areas in the discipline of Political Science:
  - American Politics, including U.S. institutions and political processes.
  - Comparative Politics of various regions of the world, such as Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and the Middle East.
  - International Relations, most notably the impact of globalization on international affairs, and how it relates to U.S. foreign policy.
  - Political Theory, or the study of political philosophy ranging from Ancient to Modern and Contemporary political thought.
- Provide students more broadly with an in-depth understanding of political institutions and processes in the United States and abroad.
- Challenge students to think critically about various dilemmas, including achieving justice, in political life.
- Enhance the ability of students to express their thoughts in writing (all upper division Political Science classes include a significant writing component).
- Prepare majors for purposeful careers in politics, government, international affairs, law, the non-profit world, journalism, business, education, social services, and other professions.
- Prepare majors for further graduate or professional study at professional schools and institutions of higher learning, both in the U.S. and abroad.

We as a Political Science department also encourage our students to take advantage of additional learning opportunities through numerous Political Science-sponsored programs that will enhance learning outcomes:

- Obtain professional experience through our Chicago-based internship program that places students in host offices throughout Chicago during the fall, spring, and summer sessions, including participating in an internship class where you share your experiences with other student interns.
- Obtain professional experience through our Washington DC-based internship program, in which students spend either the fall or spring semester in Washington DC interning and taking classes full-time at Loyola's new Washington DC center with Loyola faculty and under the guidance of a Loyola Resident Director.
- Acquire unique experience through semester-long programs, most notably the department's Model United Nations (spring semester), Mock Trial (spring semester), and Moot Court (fall semester) programs, each of which involves national competitions and a semester-long class.
- Acquire advanced methodological training, most notably through the Political Science "Political Numbers" class that satisfies the Quantitative Knowledge requirement of the Core Curriculum for Political Science students.
- Acquire advanced research skills by working on a research project under the mentorship of individual faculty members through Loyola's Undergraduate Research Opportunities Program (LUROP) and other internal or external grants.
- Gain international, cross-cultural experience by participating in study abroad opportunities led by Political Science faculty or more broadly offered through Loyola's Office for International Programs (OIP).
- Graduate with Honors in Political Science by applying for enrollment in the Political Science Honors Seminar which is offered each spring semester and open to students in their junior and senior years.
- Strengthen class-based learning by attending Political Sciencesponsored events, most notably our endowed Hartigan (fall semester) and Covey (spring semester) lecture series that bring prominent scholars and political figures to Loyola every semester to share their ideas and to meet with students.
